Expresses dissatisfaction with visit to Mint.

U.S. MINT, PHILA.

Superintendent of Mint.

Sir.

I had occasion to take a visitor to the Mint yesterday - and having been there many times before - I was surprised at what might be called the farce of entering one door and leaving by the next - having seen practically nothing.

The Attendant in waiting room instead of taking four or five visitors as formly, waited until twice that number had collected. Enough to crowd the very small enclosure in the stamping room, so that those visitors in the background saw nothing.

On reaching the Museum of Mines the Halls were unapproachable on account of the Crowd already there.

It seems to me that a little better management would secure a further inspection of the Mint. to which all citizens are entitled to. I am.

Yours Respectfully

J Bunford Samuels.

D Sir.

I had occasion to take a visitor to the Mint yesterday – and having been there many times before – I was surprised at what might be called the farce of entering one door and leaving by the next – having seen practically nothing.

The attendant in waiting room instead of taking four or five visitors as formerly, waited until twice that number had collected. Enough to crowd the very small enclosure in the stamping room so that these visitors in the background saw nothing.

On reaching the Museum of Coins the tables were unapproachable on account of the crowd already there.

It seems to me that a little better management – would secure a proper inspection of the Mint to which all citizens are entitled to. I am,

Yours Resptly.
